Faraday Society, London.
The Chemical Society was founded in 1841. In 1972 there was a merger of the membership of the Chemical Society, the Royal Institute of Chemistry, the Faraday Society and the Society for Analytical Chemistry. The Chemical Society assumed administrative and general scientific functions for the other bodies including the publication of works by all except the Society for Analytical Chemistry.
The Royal Institute of Chemistry continues to exist under its original charter in executing functions concerning the individual in a professional role. Its other functions have been transferred to the Chemical Society.
The Faraday Society has ceased to exist as a separate organization, its members now being one of the six scientific divisions of the Chemical Society, the Faraday Division.

The Society for Analytical Chemistry has become the Analytical Division of the Chemical Society, under a 5 year probationary experiment. The Society will continue to publish and sell those publications that it has originally produced until the merger is made absolute.
Works by the Chemical Society and the Royal Institute of Chemistry are found under:
Chemical Society, London.
Royal Institute of Chemistry.
Works by the other bodies are found under the following headings according to the name used at the time of publication:

Society for Analytical Chemistry.

Notes by J. Harmon on container.
SUMMARY: Two complete episodes of the radio program. In "Murder plays hide and seek," Brad Runyon's insistence that there were two corpses with the initials C. H. helps solve a double murder. In "Order for murder," a former officer has many enemies—a badly wounded soldier, a jilted sweetheart who has gone mad, and a scheming wife. One of them kills him.

Federation of South Arabia.
The Federation of Arab Amirates of the South was formed in 1959 by 6 states of the Aden Protectorate. After 1959, additional states of the protectorate joined the federation. In 1962 the federation adopted the name Federation of South Arabia; in the same year the protectorate was renamed the Protectorate of South Arabia. In 1963 the Colony of Aden joined the federation as the State of Aden. On Nov. 30, 1967, the federation was superseded by the People's Republic of Southern Yemen, which included the previously autonomous states of the Protectorate of South Arabia: the protectorate ceased to exist. On Nov. 30, 1970, the name of the People's Republic of Southern Yemen was changed to People's Democratic Republic of Yemen.
Works by these jurisdictions published before the changes on Nov. 30, 1967, are distributed under various headings according to the following explanation: Works by the Colony of Aden, and the State of Aden, are found under:
Aden.
Works by the protectorate are found under the following headings according to the name used at the time of publication:
Aden (Protectorate)
Protectorate of South Arabia.
Works by the Federation of Arab Amirates of the South, and by the Federation of South Arabia, are found under:
Federation of South Arabia.
Works published after Nov. 30, 1967, are found under the following headings according to the name used at the time of publication:
Southern Yemen.
Yemen (People's Democratic Republic)
Coexistent with these successive jurisdictions but independent of them is the State of Yemen (with capital at Ṣan'ā') which is found under:
Yemen.
